Summary:

When you have been in the legal world for the past nine years, it is hard to know what else you could possibly do with your life. Where do you even begin? Merima, or Mary Redzic, is a former In-House Counsel and current Product Marketing Manager at a legal tech company. With humor and grace, she recounts her own experiences and describes the journey of transitioning within and out of the legal industry - while finding her true passion along the way. Whether you are currently in law school, considering applying, or have been practicing for 20 years, The New JD outlines the steps you can take to succeed at a career transition and discover your true calling. Use the 14-step program that helped Merima to explore your interests, find the right people and resources, and take the leap of turning your passion into your career. The program includes: - Practical steps to take to find your passion - Recommendations on how to stay calm during this difficult transition - How to revise your resume to fit your ideal role - Steps to take in researching your salary expectations - Practical tools, including a workbook to help you discover your interests
